

Opponents of Conscription Win First Tilt

House Committee Votes To Have Army Bill Carry Provision For Volunteers First—Senate Committee Reports Favorably on Bill Voting 10 to 7—Prepare To Train Men For Reserve Officers.

WASHINGTON, APR. 18.—The lines were drawn today for a great fight between the administration and opponents in the house on the plans for raising an army by selective conscription. While the President was at the capitol telling senators and representatives that no compromise could be accepted with safety to the nation, the house military committee by a vote of 12 to 8 adopted the amendments authorizing the formal increments of 500,000 men providing that draft should be used only in the event that the volunteer system plan fails.

The senate committee called to vote today is expected to adopt the plan without any change and as originally drafted and approved by the president. The measure may be passed by the senate without waiting for action in the house.

President Wilson made very clear to those with whom he talked his determination to shove the bill for passage. He means, no doubt, he will appeal directly to the country if necessary and tell the people that in the opinion of the military advisors of the government the nation's safety depends upon the adoption of the plans as prepared by the army experts.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 18.—Opponents of selective conscription played the upper hand in the house military committee today, voted 12 to 8 to have the new army bill carry a provision to first try to raise the new force by volunteers.

Meanwhile the bill, including the conscription provision, was approved by the senate military committee 19 to 7.

The volunteer provision agreed to in principle is as follows: "That the president be and he is hereby authorized to call for 500,000 volunteers under and in accordance with the act of congress approved April 25, 1914 (the army re-organization act)." * * *

"That in the event it becomes necessary to raise an additional force of 500,000 men," the president be and he is hereby authorized to call such additional force by volunteers in the same manner. Such volunteer army shall be apportioned among the various states and territories and the District of Columbia according to population, raised in regimental units or parts thereof." * * *

"Provided that such volunteer forces be raised in accordance with the act of congress approved April 25, 1914 (the army re-organization act)." * * *

Because their demand for an increase of the prevailing high cost of crease in wages was refused, 20 men employed by the Coshocton Glass company in the construction of the new addition walked out Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock.

The men were employed in carrying material to the carpenters, wheeling, digging and for any work at once eight hour day received $2.25. Be-

First Belief was Submarines Had Been Engaged But Navy Yard Denies It.

BOSTON, APR. 18.—It was officially announced at the navy yard late today that no credence was placed in reports from three coast guard stations on Cape Cod that heavy gun fire had been heard off the coast. The positive statement was made that there had been no naval engagement and that warships had not exchanged salutes with foreign vessels.

WASHINGTON, APR. 18.—Reports of cannon firing off Cape Cod today electrified officialdom here. The reports came from the coast guard stations and officials were inclined to believe that they indicated that the patrol fleet might have sighted German submarines. Urge Mexicans To Join With Germany

(By Associated Press)
EL PASO, TEX., APRIL 18.—An explanation of the opposition reported to have taken place on the floor of the Mexican house of deputies to Carranza's neutrality plans is brought here today by an arrival from the Mexican capital.

He said German propagandists are conducting an open lobby against the Carranza plan among deputies, using money freely to secure the support of legislators for a German-Mexican alliance.

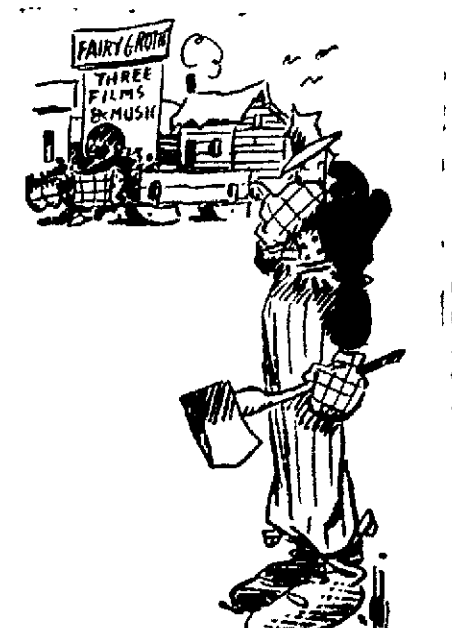

The strife over the neutrality plan, which, according to dispatches, resulted in wildest scenes of disorder in the Mexican congress Monday, is directly inspired by pro German sources, he said.

Launch Campaign To Secure Militia Company at Once

A whirlwind campaign has been launched to secure the enlistment of 100 young men in the new militia being organized in this city. The campaign is made necessary owing to the slowness of young men in enlisting. To organize a company 65 men are necessary, but it is hoped to get 100 young men.

The campaign is to start this morning and to extend to every village in the county. Automobile owners of patriotic spirit have been asked to donate the use of their cars to aid recruiting officers in making their trips to the various villages.

Money will also be needed and all who can make a contribution, no matter how large or small, have been urged to contribute to the fund necessary to finance the project. Contributions will be received at the recruiting station at the court square. Should there be any funds left after the recruiting campaign the money will be given the new company.

One patriot stated Wednesday: "It's a burning shame that in a county of more than 30,000 population there should be any difficulty in getting 100 young men in one week to enlist at a time like this. Now let every patriot show his colors and if he cannot join the army let him at least donate a small sum to aid in securing the requisite number. There should be at least a hundred recruits and no doubt a number will be unable to pass the examination and will be rejected. We want to be sure to have enough."

Two Nabbed On Ugly Charges

At an early hour this morning a man and woman, registered at the Hotel Standen as Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schance, were taken into custody by the police and lodged in the city prison on suspicion of being unmarried persons.

Schance came to Coshocton with the Alabama Minstrels, now at the Mystic, and registered at the hotel. The woman in question registered at the Barnes hotel Monday. Tuesday evening she came to the Standen hotel and remained over night. At the request of the proprietor that the woman register, Schance registered, "Mr. and Mrs. Schance."

From some source the police were tipped Wednesday evening and went to their room. The woman maintained the two were married and said she was known in Columbus, giving an address. The police left and later communicated with Columbus. Failing to verify the story told by the woman, the two were then arrested. They are charged with unlawful cohabitation.

When they were checked out by proprietor Standen Schance was unable to pay his bill at the hotel and asked the girl to pay for him. She asked permission from Standen to pay and was allowed to pay for herself and Schance.

At the police station the girl gave her name as Mabel Mason, of Columbus, daughter of Mrs. C. Mason, the father being dead. James Mason stated he would be here today to take his sister home.

In a long distance telephone conversation early this morning James Mason stated that Schance is in the habit of doing such acts. When the police entered the room, Schance said "In trouble again." The brother stated that his sister had been married to and divorced from Harry Ely, of Columbus.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, APR. 17.—Forty-two men were injured 14 seriously enough to warrant hospital attention, in the collapse of the section of the west bleachers at Neil park this afternoon just before the start of the baseball game between Columbus and Louisville American association teams.

More than 12,000 fans had gathered to witness the season inaugural in the west bleacher. Twelve physicians who were in the grand stand responded to the call for help and gave first aid, to the injured. More than 100 persons were in the section that gave way, but of this number only 42 were found to be hurt. Inquiries at the hospital late tonight disclosed that two men were suffering from internal injuries which may prove fatal.

Miss Helen Miller Relates Thrilling Story In Columbus

Miss Helen Miller aged 23, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Miller, of Elm street is still suffering from the effects of a most unusual experience in which she figured at Columbus Sunday evening. Miss Miller, who is attending Bliss business college in Columbus and resides at 31 Sells Court, was found in a dazed condition at the corner of Locust and High streets by friends, and the story which she told was a thriller.

Miss Miller reported to the Columbus police that as she was leaving St. Joseph's cathedral, Broad and Fifth street, she was grabbed by three men who pushed her into a large auto and drove her to a mysterious house, where she was drugged.

While confined in the house, she managed to get to a telephone, according to local relatives, and summoned her roommate, Miss Miller told of her predicament, but as she was giving her details one of the three men entered the room and pulled her away from the phone. Her roommate then notified the police and a search was conducted. Shortly before midnight Miss Miller was found on High street, barely able to walk.

From what the police can learn, the men, after abducting the young woman, evidently became frightened at the phone call, and after drugging her, drove her to a secluded spot in an alley near High street, where they let her out of the machine. Officers Van Gerson and Kaffits, who were notified shortly after she was found, took the young woman and tried to make her retrace her steps, but without success.

Teachers at Bliss Business college, where the girl is a student, said Monday that she was subject to fainting spells caused by a weak heart and that several times while in the classroom she had suffered from this ailment.

Then He Flew the Coop.

To a news stand came a dear patron, who seemed to have but hazy ideas of just what he wanted. He looked at stationery and he looked at pencils, and he looked at playing cards. He asked the price of this magazine and he looked over postcards and the books. The young lady who was in charge of the counter became somewhat impatient, answering questions without making a sale. At last the prospective customer asked: "Have you any paper?" "Yes, sir," was the prompt reply. We have the Aeroplane Journal and the Aviator's Gazette,"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Ohio Crops to be One Third Larger Than Year 1916

COLUMBUS, O., APRIL 17.—There will be increase in production of wheat, corn, potatoes, cattle and hogs, this year over 1916, which will average 26 per cent, according to estimates prepared today from figures furnished by the state board of agriculture.

The estimates were based on answers received from farmers in Cuyahoga, Franklin, Lucas, Hamilton and Summit counties, who were asked what increases they intended to make in acreage sown to corn, wheat and potatoes and in the number of cattle and hogs to be raised for market.

Taking these five counties as a basis, the 88 counties in Ohio will make the following gains in production:

Corn—117,868,936 bushels against 82,953,543 bushels in 1916; net gain of 34,915,392 bushels.

Wheat—32,353,646 bushels, instead of 18,944,678 bushels in 1916, a gain of 14,408,968 bushels.

Potatoes—16,638,390 bushels against 3,540,542 bushels, a gain of 13,097,848 bushels.

Hogs—1,691,920 head as against 1,726,955, an increase of 167,965 head.

Slept Seven Months.

The young Sicilian who is now gradually awakening from a seven months' sleep apparently holds the world's record as a sleeper, but England has in her time had slumberers of note. There was the case of Samuel Chilton the Somersetshire marvell of the seventeenth century, who attracted the attention of many of the learned, and set them "testing" him with "large pins and caustic ammoniac" in the gentle fashion of the day. Chilton fell asleep in August and slept on into January in spite of the large pins of inquiring scientists. A Newcastle girl, too, is recorded as having slept for nearly four months in the eighteenth century. But that seven months' sleeper was not a very different world from that he closed eyes upon.—London Chronicle.

Bones and Teeth.

The existence in infants and older children of simple malnutrition of the bones, a common malady in young farm animals, is not well established, and the prevalent imperfections of children's teeth are not certainly related to deficiencies in the diet, but seem rather to be caused by lack of exercise (due to the fine milling of our cereals and the chewing of our meat with a sausage mill), the increasing use of sugar (a readily fermentable, acid-producing food) and increasing use of fruits, the organic acids of which soften the tooth enamel.

Crushed Coal in Smelting.

A new method of utilizing coal in competition with oil fuel is being tried at Vancouver. Those conducting the experiments claim that crushed coal can be supplied to steam-producing furnaces by the same method that oil is utilized. The new process is of special interest to British Columbia, as it is proposed to apply it for smelting purposes in the big mining plants of the Province. It is claimed that seven tons of copper ore can be smelted with one ton of coal by this process, whereas formerly the ratio was a ton of coal to a ton of ore.

Dr. Frederick Blankner Is no longer a Stranger but an Acknowledged Factor in his line of work.

All day people have been coming to the Mecca Hotel Room No. 9 to meet the doctor face to face. No one has been disappointed. You can say what you will and lots of people who are not interested will say most anything, but when you come right down to brass tacks when a sick person wants to get well and they receive the services of Dr. Blankner, they realize they are getting just what they are looking for, an intelligent treatment that will get results. All are looking for a result getter. Yes, you will say that I have been to this and that doctor and I have taken all kinds of patent medicines and received no benefit. If you take a misfit treatment you will get a misfit result. Would it not be a sensible thing to do to make a little journey to room No. 9 and meet the doctor face to face in an open right from the shoulder heart to heart talk concerning any ailment of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, heart or lungs as well as nervousness that may be a result of any one or all of these organs and then receive a treatment that will put you in perfect adjustment so that you can enjoy health, happiness and physical comfort. No use to multiply words. Are you sincere in wanting to regain your health or do you want to continue on in misery. Decide this question and make a little journey to room No. 9, Mecca Hotel or stay away as suits your pleasure. Use your common sense, and just think.

GOD BLESS THE DOCTOR.

Now understand that Dr. Blankner is a physician in the fullest sense of the word. He over 31 years ago proclaimed that diseased teeth had a wonderful influence over the general health. Now he is confirmed by all well informed physicians. You can't regain your health when you have a mouthful of rotten teeth. Just one aching tooth will so disturb the general health that you will look like a long spell of sickness has prevailed. Yes, you want your teeth extracted, but you do not want to suffer death, you don't want to take chloroform, ether, gas, somnolism, eucahin or novocain and yet this is what you get when you go to have your teeth extracted. Why not take the Blankner way and come to room No. 9 where you can sit down in an easy going rocking chair and have one diseased tooth after the other extracted while you smile and say God Bless the Doctor. You don't believe it. Then go to Mr. Thomas McConnell, South 3rd Street and ask him and if he does not recommend Dr. Blankner then don't you come and if he does then you come a whooping. No more to the wise need be said.

Lancaster Woman Able to Tend to Home Duties Again.

Monday at James L. Boyd's.

Mr. Dunfee, who has been ill is improving at this writing.

The Easter service held in the M. E. church, Sunday evening, was well attended and a good program rendered.

WORKS IN FACTORY, TOO.

"I work all day at the Hocking glass plant and then sew until it is almost dark."

This remark, made by Mrs. Alva Roser, who lives on West Fair avenue, Lancaster, shows what a woman can do when she feels well.

Miss Roser was just about ready to give up when she felt well. She was sewing at the glass factory was a great task because she was so run down.

"In the mornings I usually get up tired. By 10 o'clock I feel as though I ought to be home. In the evenings I was completely tired out."

"About six weeks ago I read a statement about 'Tandae.' It was made by a woman I know, and I knew she would not make a false statement. So I tried a bottle of Tandae. Almost from the first I began to improve. My mind tasted better, and the headaches left me. However, it was not until I started on the second bottle that I noticed any great difference. Then it was that I began to take on weight. I did not feel so tired in the mornings. As I continued to take Tandae I got stronger and stronger. I am feeling fine now. After my day's work I take pleasure in sewing. Often I sew as late as 10 o'clock. I'm catching up with my sewing that I had to neglect so long because I was so tired. I generally used to be about half past seven."

"Tandae has been a blessing to me."

Tandae may be obtained in Coshocton at Page & Lorenz, Druggists.

Coshocton Woman, Who Married Spanish Count, Puts Novels To Shame

Local friends of the Countess Blanca de Orvies, formerly Miss Minnie McDonald, of this city, will be interested in the following article which appeared in a recent issue of the Los Angeles Times.

DYNAMIC COUNTESS PUTS STORY BOOKS TO SHAME.

(By Emily Squier.)

Don't you remember, when you used to read such books as "Lady Audley's Secret" and "The Love of the Countess," how the said lady and countess were wont to stroll around languidly, resting their snow-white arms on marble sun dials and flop down on tiger skins to yawn some unsuspecting youth? Either the novels had the wrong steer on the subject or else the languid and vamping countess has become passe. For right here in our midst is a bona fide countess who upsets all traditions as to what titled ladies should and shouldn't do. She isn't languid, unless you can call a whirlwind languid, and one can't imagine her stooping to vampire methods. In the first place, she wouldn't have to.

The Countess Blanca de Orvies is first of all a charming and gracious woman, much more democratic than some of our own social nabobs, and is, in addition, an author, a clubwoman and, on occasion a lecturer.

Perhaps it is because the Countess Blanca de Orvies is an American woman that she has chosen to follow her own ideas of life; or perhaps it is her very cosmopolitan life which has given her a broader idea of things.

At any rate, she displays an activity along literary and executive lines that makes her personality compelling and unusual.

Her late husband was a diplomat, having served as Vice-Consul from Salvador to Liverpool and later as Chilean Consul to Pittsburgh. After his death the Countess spent her time in travel and in studying her hobby, Egyptology.

It is in this respect that the countess puts it all over the grand dames of the best sellers. When she starts to talk about auras, and reads one's future by getting the astral color of the nose, red, blue, or yellow, and tells one's characteristics by her number at table, or dips into the mysterious doctrine of Isis, the goddess of Egypt, the layman gasps for breath and goes out dazed, and with an idea of countesses that didn't come out of a story book.

She has published a book on the subject of psycho-palmistry, which follows the ancient Egyptian system of basing entity on a mathematical certainty by number, color and musical vibrations.

The Countess is the guest of Mrs. Arthur Shookroft of Niagara Falls. The two are making their headquarters at the Hotel Green, Pasadena, but are spending most of their time touring Southern California.

The Countess is the daughter of George McDonald, who for a number of years ran the McDonald House in the building now occupied by the Veeva hotel.

A RAW, SORE THROAT

Eases Quickly When You Apply a Little Musterole

And Musterole won't blister like the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Just spread it on with your fingers. It penetrates to the sore spot with a gentle tingle, loosens the congestion and draws out the soreness and pain.

Musterole is a clean, white ointment made with oil of mustard. It is fine for quick relief for sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bite, colds on the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). Nothing like Musterole for croupy children. Keep it handy for instant use.

shall be recruited in local units as far as practicable, and company of officers may be appointed from such units on passing such reasonable and practicable examination as to figures as the president may direct.

By "Selective Draft."
"And provided further, that upon the completion of the enrollment as provided in this act and in the event the president decides that such additional force or force cannot be effectively raised and maintained under the call for volunteers as herein provided, the president be and he is hereby authorized to raise and organize the same by the selective draft as herein provided."

While the two committees were acting, President Wilson was at the capitol conferring with senate leaders on the administration war measures, particularly the army bill.

The senate committee rejected an amendment by Senator McKellar authorizing the president to call for 500,000 volunteers, and made only a few changes in the bill as drawn by the army general staff.

Would Bar Liquor.
One amendment would bar liquors from small camps where the new army is to be trained, and another would include persons engaged in agriculture in the industries exempted from service on account of military reasons.

The president disapproved the bill. The president told senators he would consent to no compromise because the war department experts after careful examination and discussion had decided that selective conscription was the only effective way of raising a strong army.

The administration expects the army bill to be made the unfinished business of the senate, so that it can be pushed to passage promptly. Then, with the prestige of having passed the senate, the measure is expected to receive more prompt and favorable consideration in the house.

HOW SENATORS VOTED
Senators who voted for the McKellar amendment were Reed, Kirby, Thomas, Hitchcock and McKellar, Democrats, and New and Sutherland, Republicans.

Senators on the committee said the war department estimates that if the measure passes the first 500,000 men will be in training camps by August 1.

But when the volunteer system fails to provide sufficient numbers of men the president would have authority to resort at once to selective conscription.

STATEMENT BY DENT
Chairman Dent made this statement: "The committee agreed to put in the bill provisions for a call for 500,000 volunteers in the first instance and for 500,000 more if the president wants, the number in each case contemplated in the administration bill for conscription."

"The committee has not yet fixed the military age, but it probably will be between 21 and 18, instead of the 19 to 25 contemplated in the administration measure. The president is authorized to proceed with the enrollment of registration of men between the military ages immediately and on completion of that enrollment and registration, the president is authorized to decide which he will proced with the volunteer or draft systems. But meanwhile the volunteer system will have been in operation and the volunteers will be coming into the service in large numbers. Of course on the final analysis after the volunteers plan has been in operation and the machinery of registration and enrollment completed the president would decide as to the respective two plans."

PREPARING TRAINING CAMPS.

CHICAGO, APRIL 18.—The work of preparing camps in which to train men as reserve officers for the half million troops raised for the new army was begun in earnest today, following the announcement last night of the plans by Major General Thomas Barry, commander of the central department of the army.

There are to be six camps in the central department, located as follows: Fort Sheridan, two camps, one for Illinois and one for Michigan and Wisconsin at Fort Harrison, two camps under one command and one for Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio.

At Fort Snelling, one for Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota and Nebraska.

At Fort Riley, one camp for Missouri, Kansas and Colorado.

The object of each camp is the training and selection of officers for a division and one additional regiment of cavalry. Maximum attendance at each camp will be 2500.

The six training camps, which are to open on May 8, are expected to furnish about one-third of the 10,000 officers—majors, captains and second lieutenants—required for an army of 500,000.

SOPHS BAT IN VICTORY OVER THE FRESHMEN

The first baseball game of the season was played yesterday afternoon at the Red Sea diamond when the teams of the Freshmen and Sophomores classes of Central II met in the first inter-class series.

The game was well played, but three errors being marked up against the Freshmen. Hall and Callahan pitched good ball. Webb and Rickits at short and second featured in the game, fielding and throwing in fine form. The Sophomores, however, were stronger at the bat and knocked out an 8 to 3 victory.

An interclass game will be played each Wednesday, the Freshmen playing the Juniors next week. The game yesterday was played under ideal conditions and a fair sized crowd attended.

Coach Smith can not definitely announce that the Central Varsity will journey to Zanesville Friday, playing the high school team of that city. Zanesville will play later in the season. The line up and score of yesterday's game follows:

Freshmen	Sophomores
Hall	Carns
G. Hall	Callahan

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I feel obliged to say a good word for San-Cura Ointment in consideration of the wonderful results I have obtained from using it.

I had blood poison and after having part of my leg amputated, a decision was reached that it would be necessary to amputate again the next day. My mother, however, advised me to try San-Cura Ointment, which she purchased, and took me home from the hospital.

The ointment has almost cured this habit and the gangrene has disappeared entirely. I cannot recommend San-Cura Ointment too highly. You are at liberty to publish this if you wish, the more the better.

Can Any Kidney Medicine Equal This Record?

I heartily recommend Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root as a valuable and very commendable preparation. It is 32 years old in this trade and today enjoys a splendid demand. I have used it myself for too frequent desire to urinate and obtained the most beneficial results. I do not know of a single instance where it failed to accomplish good effects.

How a Debt Was Collected

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Among the strange people in the world the strangest to me are those who consider it their duty to give largely, but who in transactions of a business nature are incredibly mean.

Such characters are common among rich men, whose motive usually is to make something, even out of their donations—men who don't hide their light under a bushel. But Miss Euphemia Baxter was not at all such a person. Few knew of her charities. She supported an old woman for years who had been an intimate friend of her mother's. At the same time she beat her laundress down to starvation prices. She lived in a hall bedroom herself and spent a lot of money fixing up a home for an invalid aunt. It was the furniture to go into this home that I sold Miss Baxter.

Falling in sending out my regular collector, I thought I would try a woman. She came away after a tongue skimming that decided her never to undertake such a task again.

I had a salesman, Frank Emery, in my employ, a good looking young fellow with one of the pleasant smiles I ever saw on a man's face. Where other persons would scowl he would smile. He was invaluable as a salesman, especially since most of my customers were women. One of the other clerks used to say of him, "One of Frank's smiles sells a washstand, another sells a bureau, and when he shows his side grinders it means a whole bedroom set."

One day Frank said to me, "Mr. Rugles, what'll you give me if I collect your debt from Miss Baxter?"

"I don't think any one can collect it, Frank," I replied. "I fancy the lady went in debt for it and has never been able to stop giving long enough to accumulate the amount of the bill. You can't squeeze blood out of a turnip."

"I'll tell you what I'll do, Mr. Rugles. I didn't have any vacation last summer. The dull season is on now, and you can best spare me. Give me a few weeks' vacation and I'll see if I can get your money."

I acceded to his terms and, giving him a statement of the account—$142—sent him off to collect the debt in any way he might be able. The boys said that he'd get it in installments, giving a smile for each installment.

Three weeks passed before I heard a word from my collector. Then one day he came into the store, smiled and handed me the amount of Miss Baxter's indebtedness. I asked him how he had managed it, but he did not seem inclined to tell me. Indeed, he looked rather serious about it. This surprised me, for I had never known him to look serious about anything. But I got the story out of him piece-meal.

He had gone to Miss Baxter and told her he had heard that she was a tender hearted person. Would she kindly interest herself to get him employment? He was hungry and shabby, he wore a castoff suit, and he was not very strong. He could not do manual labor.

Quite likely it was the smile that did the business. Miss Baxter gave him the wares that he got something to eat while she was hunting a job for him. He put away the money, and she found plenty of jobs. But either they required too much strength or Frank was especially unfitted for them. He kept accepting donations from day to day, the lady having hard work to induce him to do so and only under promise that he should be permitted to return them as soon as she found a position for him. He very soon cleaned her out of all the ready money she possessed, after which she began to sacrifice what few valuables she owned, finally pawning her winter coat, which she greatly needed.

I declined to take money achieved in this way, which appeared to be a great relief to Frank. Having started out to collect the debt in his own peculiar way, he was bound to follow the matter to the bitter end. He managed to preserve his equality till the lady gave up her winter coat for his benefit. That broke him up. I told him to return the money to Miss Baxter. He said that could only be done in some roundabout manner, but it would be done.

Before the next season opened one of my competitors offered Frank better pay than I was giving him, and I was obliged to double his salary. Instead of giving me a single smile when I told him of the ruse, smiles seemed to bubble out all over him.

"It's not on my own account alone, Mr. Rugles," he said, "that I rejoice. I am engaged, and this ruse smiles me to marry."

"Who is the lady, Frank?" I asked.

"Miss Euphemia Baxter,"

"Great Scott!" I exclaimed. "You don't mean it?"

"I do. The truth is that while I was getting money out of her to pay her debt to you I was getting sweet on her. At last, instead of trying to collect the debt, I was testing her to see how far she would sacrifice herself for me."

"Have you confessed that you were deceiving her?"

"You bet I haven't, and I never will. I've got the money she gave me yet. I'm trying to find a way to give it to her to help her with the transaction."

"Hope you'll succeed. Make out a list of articles you'll need to furnish a home and they shall be my wedding gift."

Austria's Marriage Law.

The Austrian supreme court has decided that the law prohibiting marriages between Christians and non-Christians applies to marriages contracted outside Austria. The court held invalid the marriage of Count Rudolf Schirring and a Protestant of Berlin. The count left the Roman Catholic church in 1913, and was married here in August, 1914. In the following October he returned to the Catholic faith. The lower courts held the marriage was invalid, and this decision now is sustained by the supreme court. Under the Austrian law non-Christians may marry Jews, but not Catholics nor Protestants.

Thinks the Boys Need It.

In the Woman's Home Companion a woman writes: "Comparing our boys with those of the present warring nations, our boys seem to lack culture and physical training. Beside the thrifty European peasants our lower classes of boys are shiftless and lazy. Even one year's enforced military training would make real men of the thousands of potroom hangers-on and the budding criminals that infest our juvenile courts. It would mean enforced education for boys between sixteen and twenty, and preparedness either for war or life's battles. Think of a nation of healthy, clear-headed boys, trained to discipline, concentration and energy!"

The Price of Peace.

"I quarreled with my wife yesterday, and we haven't spoken since." "Why don't you make up?" "I'm going to. All I'm worried about now is the indemnity."

to confirm the press reports from Boston that such thing actually had been heard, but officials refused to speculate on what it all meant.

Officials said that they will not be surprised to learn that German submarines, now in American waters, have been sent to the bottom. The fleet is leaving nothing to chance, but is scouring the waters adjacent to the Atlantic coast in an effort to locate the submarines that now are positively known to be lurking there.

The navy's reply to the assertion of the land experts, who had asserted that the commanding officer of the destroyer Smith mistook a big fish for the wake of a torpedo, came today when it was positively declared that the officer of the deck on the vessel not only saw the passage of the torpedo but that he also saw the periscope of the submarine.

The Smith, like all boats of her class, has had plenty of actual practice with torpedoes. They also pointed out today that it would be utterly impossible for a trained man to mistake the wake of a torpedo fired at a shallow angle as it would be to mistake a destroyer for any sort of a fish.

The navy realizes the peril to navigation that these submarines carry. The firing reported off the Massachusetts coast today has but home to officials, the damage that a submarine could do to the coastwise trade. The point where the guns were heard was in the straits track from Halifax. All inward and outward bound ocean liners, under normal conditions, would follow this track.

It is supposed by naval experts that the submarine that are believed to be on this side of the ocean are some that were detached from the flotilla that has been operating off the Irish coast. In addition it is declared that there is a strong possibility that in the number may be some of the mine laying type. This type is of peculiar construction and carry in addition to a large number of mines of the most powerful character enough oil and other supplies to make a trip around the world without being replenished. The German admiralty also has to draw upon to act as submarine tenders the Deutschland and a sister vessel which was to have been named the Amerika, whose capacity is familiar to all Americans.

In regard to a suggestion that the firing off Provincetown might be a salute to the British party coming to the United States for a conference, Captain A. P. Robertson, chief of staff of the First naval district said:

"It is very improbable that in time of war that any ship would fire a salute. I don't believe the firing was for a salute. If there was any firing it was not for that purpose. There must be something else."

Surface Living.

"Most of us continue to live unnecessarily near our surface," said Professor James, when speaking of the stored-up resources of energy hidden in man, and seldom drawn upon. "The plain fact remains that men, the world over, possess amounts of resources which only the exceptional individual pushes to their full use." Surface living, leaving untouched our greatest capacities, physical, mental and moral, makes our lives commonplace and unsatisfactory. We mourn that we accomplish so little, but we do not put our whole selves either into our work or into our religion, into our aims for this world or for the next. "With all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," was God's measure for devotion when the law was given. Unused resources rob both the physical and the spiritual life of power, and make it unsuccessful.

PEACE IN BERLIN

The extent of the food shortage in the Central Powers; the attitude of the people there toward a longer continuance of the war; the actual overtures the governments of the Central Powers are making singly or jointly to secure peace; and their general attitude now as compared with that at the beginning of the great world crisis almost three years ago is largely a matter of speculation among both belligerents and neutrals.

News dispatches vary widely as to what is taking place in the interior of Europe. The one great matter of speculation is, of course, as to the probability of peace. That peace is ardently longed for by the rank and file of the people on both sides is beyond doubt. Whether the Central Powers are as tired of the war and as discouraged by its untoward progress as some of the news dispatches indicate, no one in this country can say. Neither can we give full credence to the warlike reports which emanate from Berlin and Vienna as to their determination to fight on.

Socialists in Denmark and Germany are authority for the assertion that peace will come within ninety days. They say that Germany is now ready to restore Belgium, Serbia and Northern France and to agree with Russia for the free navigation of the Dardanelles. German Socialists seem to think that peace on such a basis will be satisfactory to all the countries fighting Germany except England. If they believe anything of this sort they are reckoning without their host. France surely would not be satisfied with such a peace nor would the United States. It is just as likely that Russia, Italy and all the others would instantly reject it.

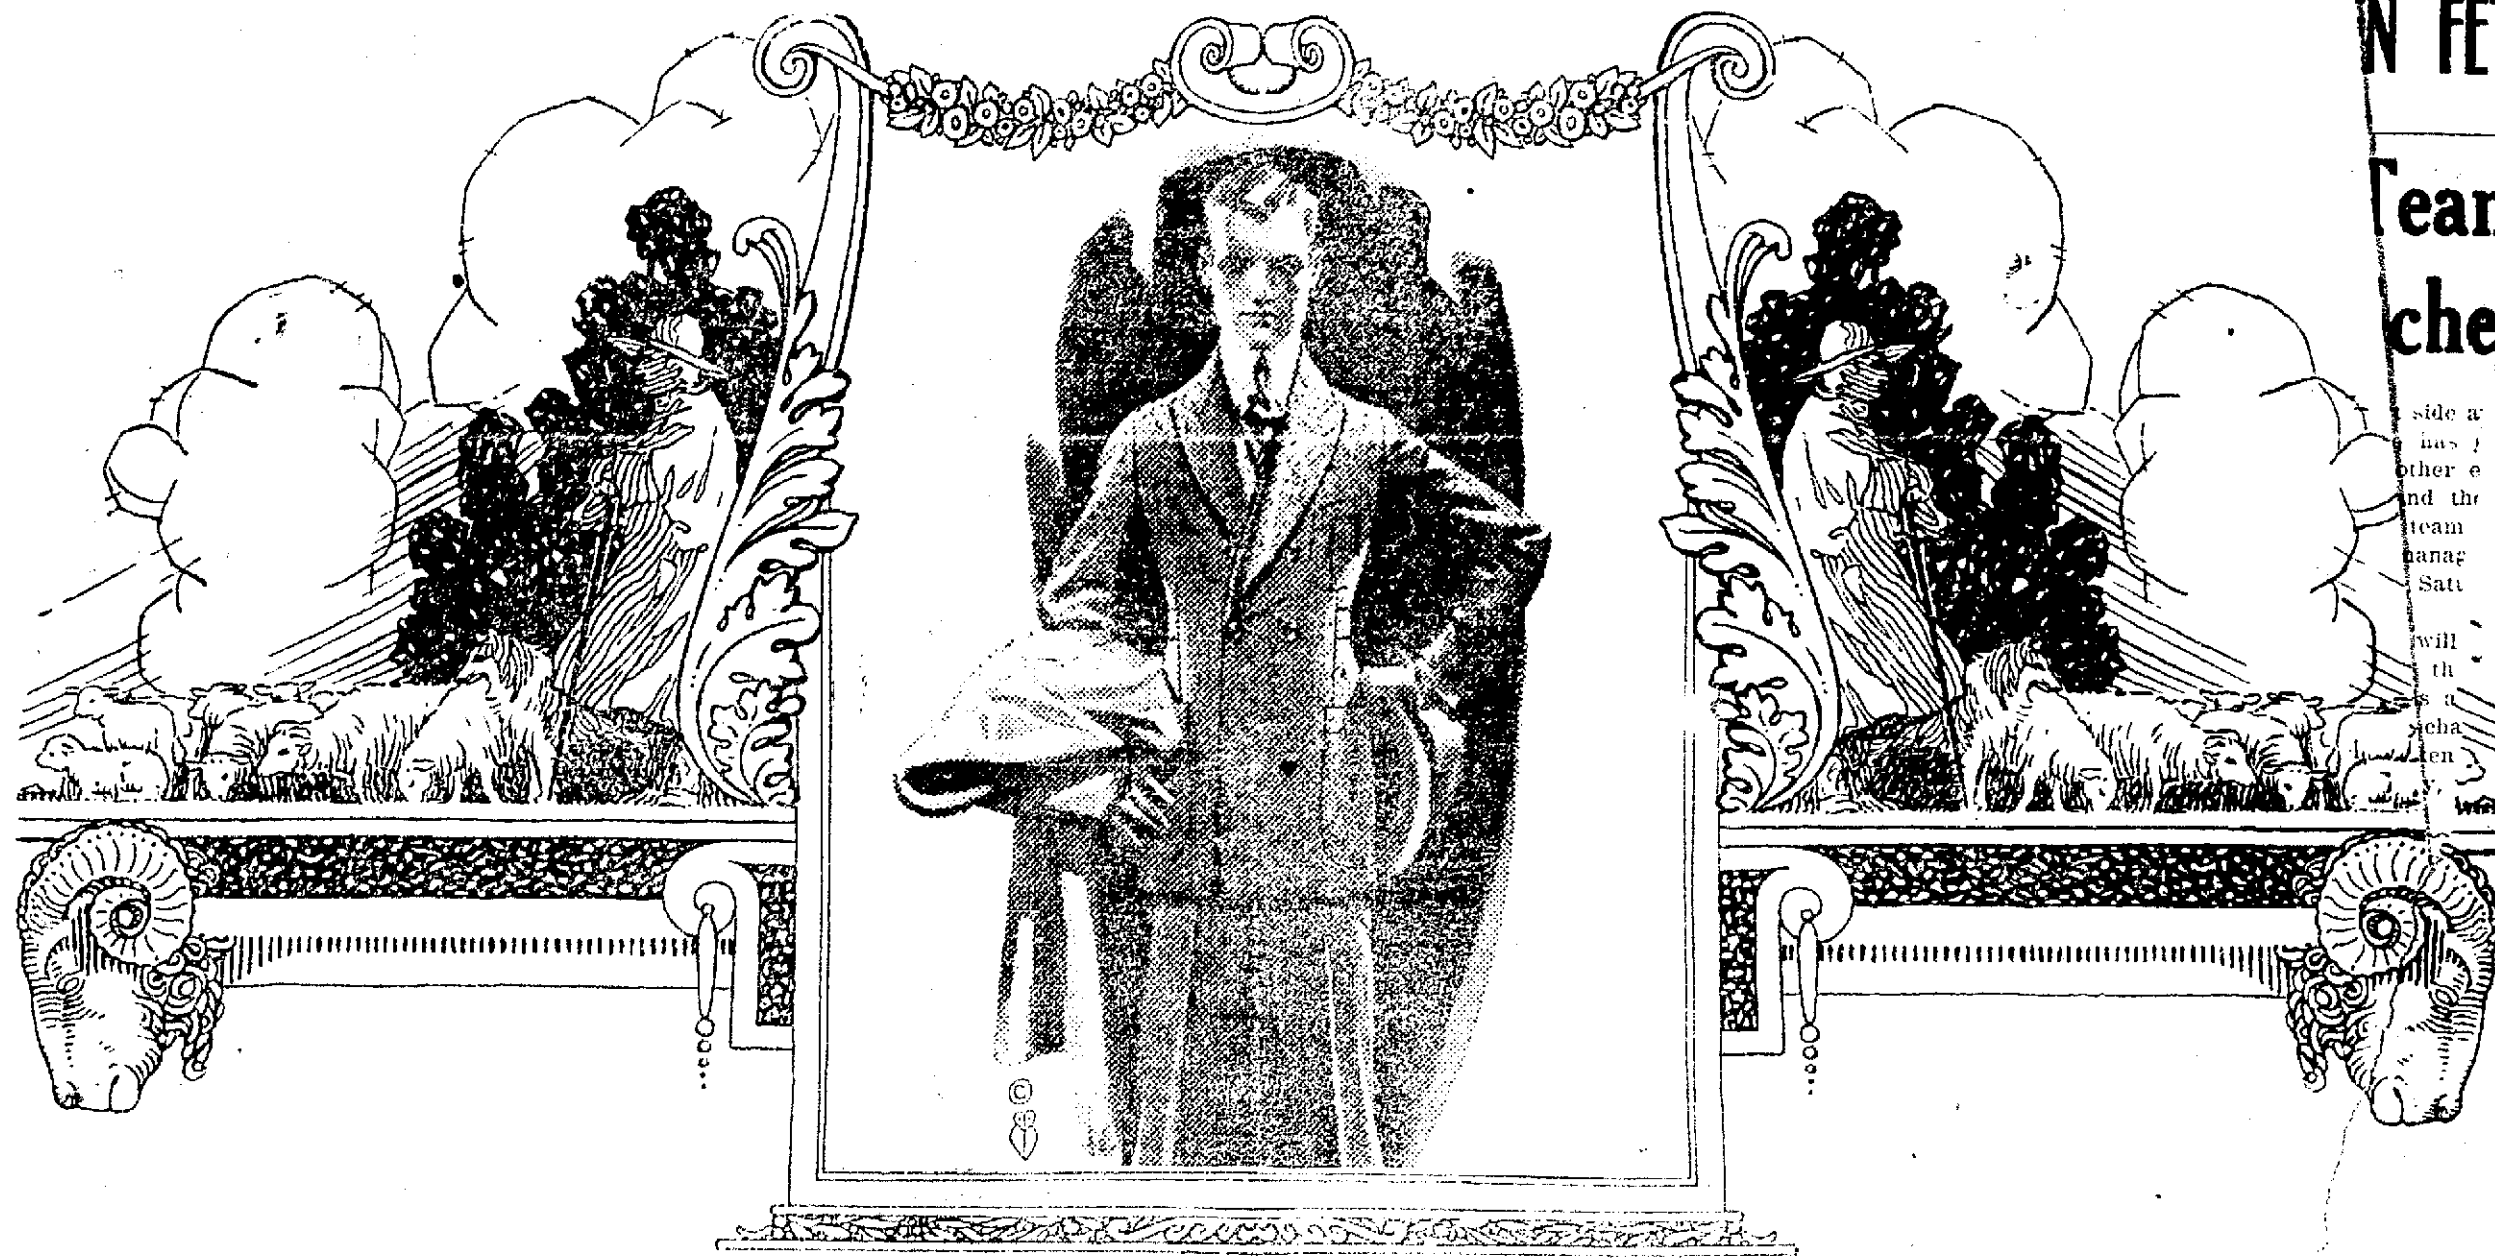

An exchange aptly says there should be no peace now unless it is "made in Germany." It continues, "There can indeed be nothing even faintly resembling a permanent peace until the Prussian autocracy and the Hohenzollern despotism realize that their rule is over forever. For Germany to 'restore' Belgium, which never belonged to her, or to evacuate France, in which her only rights are those of the burglar or yeggman, would amount to nothing. Her government must

THE EX-CZAR

By WALT MASON

My old friend Nick is now an ex: no more a crown his brow he decks. The people weary of his reign and showed him where to leave the train. A monarch with a head of bone should not be perched upon a throne in troublous times when kings must try to earn their salaries or die. From palaces and crowns remote the czar must seek his straying goat. A kind and pleasant gent was he, this Nicholas, whose end we see. But he would never use his head, and by false prophets he was led. Great Russians begged, at every chance, that he would come out from his trance, and reign according to the rules laid down by Hoyer; but knives and fools possessed the bonthead monarch's ear until he saw his doom appear. Now, stripped of all his kingly state, of all the pomp that made him great, by loyal countrymen accursed, he sadly wanders, verst on verst, o'er hill and dale and moor and fen, and hopes he'll find his goat again. But royal goats, when once they stray, are gone forever and a day.

Made It Easy To Understand.

A grave and dignified D. D., after listening to the recitation of the catechism by a class of children, was asked to make a few remarks to them, whereupon he arose and said: "I desire, my young friends, to express an unqualified approbation of this exercise. I regard the catechism as the most admirable epitome of religious belief extant." The superintendent pulled his sleeve and asked him to explain the word epitome for the benefit of the children. He elucidated as follows: "By epitome, children, I mean—that is—it is synonymous with synopsis."

When City Is Surrounded.

Article 18 of General Orders No. 100, United States Rules of War, reads as follows: "When the commander of a besieged place expels the non-combatants in order to lessen the number of those who consume his stock of provisions, it is lawful, though an extreme measure, to drive them back, so as to hasten surrender."

"There is no obligation imposed, either by the conventional rules of the unwritten laws of war, in case of siege or bombardment, to allow private citizens or women or children to leave a besieged town, even when a bombardment is about to begin."—Stockton, "Outlines of International Law," chapter 19, the Rules of War.—New York Mail.

Superstitions of Japan.

In Japan the nursery is still protected from the inroads of measles and other infectious by means of an inscription over the nursery door stating with exquisite urbanity "this child is not at home." In the Wellcome Historical Medical Museum, says the London Lancet, a most fascinating exhibition is on view. Illustrative of "Japanese charms, amulets, votive offerings, and objects of medical interest," among which these nursery notices occupy an important place. Akin to these notices are the charms embodied as toys. A yellow tiger with a wagging head is now said to be a toy, but anciently it was a form of exorcism against palsy and numbness of the limbs.

Requirements for Works Manager.

There are many good mechanical engineers—there are also many good business men—but the two are rarely combined in one person. But this combination of qualities, together with at least some skill as an accountant, either in one person or more, is essential to the successful management of industrial works, and has its highest effectiveness if united in one person, who is thus qualified to supervise either personally or through assistants, the operations of all departments of a business, and to subordinate each to the harmonious development of the whole.—Engineering Magazine.

JETHER, son of Jesse.
GAAL, elder brother of Jether.
JESSE, father of Gaal and Jether.
HULDAH, his wife.
NAOMI, cousin of Jether.
TOLA, friend of Jether.
RISSAH, a handmaiden of Huldah.
SHELAH, servant of Jesse.
NADINA, keeper of lodgings in Jerusalem.

MERBEL, friend of Jether.
THE PROPHET.
Dancing girls, Egyptians, Arabs, servants in waiting, Nubians, etc.

Gaal's face was cold and hard as he stood before Jether. Surely no one would ever have suspected that these two men who faced each other with anger in their hearts and grim intensity in their faces were really brothers. The one, not less than forty, strongly built and rough visaged, with brawny arms bare to the shoulder, showing muscles of steel, clad in rough but serviceable cloth garments far more expensive than the simple sheep-herd skins of the young brother, who seemed not a day over twenty and had the slender, lithe, agile frame of a splendid young athlete.

"Thou worthless one!" bellowed Gaal angrily. "Where wert thou last night?"

Jether flippantly and lightly turned on his heel and strode toward the well.

"Where I chose to be," he answered. "Then I can guess!" cried Gaal, controlling his anger with difficulty. "While I have sweated in the sun to bring the harvest in before the holy day, father and I and all of us, down to the meanest servant, thou hast shirked thy one task like the other, lying about by day and night, companion to the worthless in the village or on thy back a staring at the sky. How thou canst be of the same par as myself I cannot see. Yet thou art my brother, and one day I must give thee a third of all there is, yea, a third. Be thou accursed!"

Jether laughed contemptuously. Before him stood the well, the pitcher of water which Rissah had just recently drawn to take within the house and the cup from which the servants quenched their thirst. He filled the cup with water, and, turning to the towering figure of his elder brother, whose fist was raised in a threatening manner as though to strike him, the young boy hurled the water full in the eyes of the elder. Gaal staggered back in surprise and anger.

"Take thou my blessing for thy course," cried Jether as Gaal, temporarily blinded, sought to dry his eyes. "May the water cool thy wrath and purify thee for the festival, thou pious, self-complacent hypocrite!"

In another moment the two men were clasped in each others arms as Gaal, making a sudden rush, sought to overthrow the younger brother. But Jether was quick of foot and agile in squirming from his brother's grasp. Again they chafed, each striving to throw the other, yet Gaal in spite of his superior size proved not more than an equal match for the energetic Jether. Suddenly a voice, strong, deep, commanding, made both brothers pause and involuntarily relax their holds.

"Stop, my sons!"

Upon the upper step in the doorway of the house stood the aged patriarch, Jesse, of the tribe of Judah. His staff in hand, his left hand raised in an imperious gesture, his long white hair and beard making him seem almost like an inspired prophet. Shortly and with majestic upon the road, Jesse, in who sixty years before had been the lord of Israel of the great King David, came down the steps, while the two brothers fell back before him. The patriarch gazed reproachfully from one to the other and shook his head sorrowfully. Gaal took this silent rebuke as a reflection upon himself and sought to make his peace with his father.

"I did but reprove him for his laziness, my father, and he hurled an insult into my very beard," he cried angrily. "Didst thou but know one half of Jether's doings, my father?"

Gaal hesitated as if the indictment were too great to lay upon his father's head, but Jether laughingly and mockingly bade him go on.

"Speak, good brother," jeered Jether. "Thou hast never before lost any chance to speak ill of me. This time thou canst find many witnesses against me. My father listens. Speak."

Jesse raised his hand for silence. "Peace, both of ye!" he cried. "I am the master here. Gaal, thou art the elder. Thou shouldst be the wiser. Thou knowest Jether has too high a pride to let thee tell him what to do. Besides, that is my duty, not thine. Go get thee ready for the evening meal."

"Gaal hesitated and cast an angry look at the mocking Jether.

"Go, I say," commanded the venerable patriarch, pointing toward the house. With a muttered and indistinct remark Gaal slowly reentered the house.

"And thou, Jether," continued Jesse, laying his hand in kindly affection upon the shoulder of his younger son, "thou hast done wrong to lift thy hand against thy brother. Never again let there be strife between you. To-night before I ask God's blessing upon my household, yes, even before we gather at the table, thou shalt tell thy brother that thou dost repent of thy childish act."

"I ask pardon of Gaal?" replied Jether incredulously, drawing back in amazement. "Ask pardon of Gaal?"

The kindly face of the venerable Jesse smiled indulgently as he gazed upon the headstrong boy.

"Not less for thine own sake than for his," he continued. "Thou art too quick of speech. Thy pride is over great, though pride is honorable in moderation. Thine, if unbridled, may bring thee to calamity."

"I'll not have Gaal the master over me," muttered Jether.

"Nor shalt thou," agreed Jesse approvingly. "Only to thy father shalt thou account. Where didst thou spend last night? From the high watch tower I saw thy sheep upon the hills at dawn this morning, but thee I did not see. Where didst thou spend last night?"

Jether came to his father petulantly almost pleading. "Am I a child?"

The old man looked with loving eyes upon the lad.

"In many ways thou art, and yet the fault is not all thine. Thy mother hath indulged thee overmuch, and I myself perhaps. Jether, thou dost not know how dear thou art to us, thou child of our old age, and such a child wert thou, so beautiful."

Once more Jether clinched his fist with anger and resentment.

"A child—again always a child," he protested. "Canst thou not understand a child becomes a man? Thou, too, dost treat me as Gaal does—when I am no longer a child, but a man full grown."

Jesse nodded his head in approval.

"Aye, a man thou art, as I would have thee, and with children of thine own. It is thy mother's dearest wish and mine that when age shall claim thee from us we may sit in peace beneath that very fig tree and behold thy little ones—aye, thine and Gaal's also, play in the shade before us."

The eyes of the young boy again flashed fire.

"Not my children with Gaal's?" he cried. "That shall never be."

"Thine with Gaal's, as I have said," responded Jesse, raising his voice and speaking with the authority of a master. "My father's father built this house, and it shall shelter both my sons. This large enough for all ye two may bring thee. Gaal is thine elder brother, and to him, of course, the first-born's rights belong. But I know full well that he will respect my wishes. Here shall ye two abide in peace to gether."

All the fire and suppressed hatred of the elder brother which had been smoldering in the young boy's breast for weeks and months broke forth in a torrent of words.

"I live under Gaal's roof—eat at his table!" cried Jether. "Nay! Sooner than that I would share a crust with any beggar on the road. Father, I would not hurt thee, but thou canst not see beyond these bills. Thou canst not understand how one might wish to live afar."

"My son, what meanest thou?" inquired Jesse, amazed.

"I am a man in all eyes save thine," continued Jether wildly. "The things I feel are what a man feels. Yet here I am nothing. Not only thou, but Gaal, whom I detest, would be my master. I tell thee, father, no man shall be my master."

"What wouldst thou do, my son?"

"Go elsewhere; see the great world beyond these hills; live my own life; be my own master; not Jether, a son of Jesse, but Jether—himself!"

The venerable patriarch smiled, much pleased at the boy's assertion of manhood and independence. He came to the boy and patted him indulgently upon the shoulder.

"Thou shalt go," he asserted proudly. "I will send thee to the tribe of Issachar. We have a kinsman there, a leather merchant, thy mother's second cousin. For her sake Jehoazak will welcome thee and for thine own sake also. Thou art a bright lad and hast seen much here of cattle. Thou shalt live with him a whole year and learn much of the ways of others before thou shalt come back to us, enriched with knowledge."

Jether broke away from his father's embrace. How little the patriarch understood the feelings of the boy! Why, merely to go to the tribe of Issachar meant transferring obedience from one master to another, and he would be free—free to join the waiting Tola in the valley below and to explore the wonders of the great city of Jerusalem. Yet his father would merely transfer his bondage.

be made to realize, not only that it is impossible for it to impose its will on the world, but quite possible for the world to impose its will on the government. Otherwise, any peace that might be arranged would be a miserable mockery.

"England has been thru this business before. For a quarter of a century it kept alive the war against Napoleon, and it finally 'got' him. It will be so now. It will stay with this job. We are proud to believe that the American people will stay with it. Germany must not only 'evacuate' France, but rehabilitate it. And so of Belgium and Serbia. This war was made in Germany. Peace must also be made there. The sooner this is understood the better. We have no idea that France would be willing to settle on any other terms. She as well as Great Britain, will be found to be a very serious obstacle to any peace that does not involve the utter overthrow of the criminal conspiracy against mankind known as the German government. Forty-six years ago the Germans dictated peace at Versailles. Now it must be made at Potsdam.

"This nation entered the war, not to get a miserable compromise, but a real settlement. Nothing less will satisfy it. From the way things are going now, it is not improbable that a lasting peace, based on the downfall of the men responsible for this criminal war, may be negotiated within another year. No suggestions of compromise should receive the slightest consideration."

PEOPLE'S FORUM

REPLY TO REV. BUXTON

Editor The Tribune:

About five years ago the liquor men of Ohio, taking advantage of the political situation, succeeded in having a license clause adopted in the new constitution submitted to the voters of Ohio at that time. The clause was approved by a majority of the voters of Ohio, largely thru the liquor control of the large cities of the State.

Afterward we had what was known as the Home Rule amendment submitted and adopted thru the same influences.

The campaigns of the liquor men pretty closely parallel the campaign, the militarists have carried thru to have the country adopt and copy Prussian militarism. But the liquor dealers secured a majority of the people to sanction their measures, while the militarists have boldly ignored the majority of the people and forced their policy to adoption upon the president and a vacillating, cowardly and servile body of the legislators who depend upon the spoils of office and the pork barrel to please the people and justify their surrender to the clamor of the militarists.

What opportunities the people of the country have had to express their views have been invariably utilized to express disapproval of militarism. The labor organizations have been almost unanimously against it. The farmers, thru the Grange went on record against it. Peace societies and women's organizations have worked constantly against it. At no stage of the campaign could it be honestly said that any great influences outside of the financial promoters, the corporate owned and managed press and portions of the professional circles were in favor of it.

Yet Mr. Buxton tells us because after over two years clamorous, persistent effort on the part of those personally interested and benefited by it and in defiance of the great majority of the people who are to suffer most of the woes inevitably following war, we should accept without question the decision of those who have thrust war upon us and unite to make it as terrible as possible for those who must suffer the consequences of the war.

He would deny the opponents of the measure the right to protest against the criminal folly of the step; to criticize the measure or offer an alternative, and even shows impatience with those who can not conscientiously accept the decision and approve it.

We ask Rev. Buxton, going back to the liquor question, if he when the people of Ohio ratified the license clause, took the same stand toward it?

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is a sign you have been eating too much meat, which forms uric acid.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either, consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life-saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

If he publicly announced it as the duty of every one to accept the license clause as the final say and to stand for the support of the liquor business in its new phase for all there was in it. Did he criticize those who would not accept, as he has the pacifists in their opposition to war? If he did not he is not consistent.

Then Rev. Buxton is also in favor of compulsory military service. Why? Because the mothers and wives do not want to give up their boys and husbands to be sacrificed to the God of Greed? What else is it for? Who will profit by their slaughter but those who have financed the war in Europe, who have financed the campaign for militarism and who will finance the struggle henceforth. The members of Congress who have stood by the people are denounced. The pacifists who protest against the mad step are denounced. By whom? The "apostles" of the France of Peace!

Mr. Wilson threatens Congress with an appeal to the people. Good! Come on Mr. President. That is just what the people want. Give us a referendum on the whole question and you will then see the difference between the American people as they are, and as you see them at the pie counter and the pork barrel in the persons of their so-called representatives.

But when you come to us for our sentiments let every man vote and abide by his decision. If a majority of American citizens want war and conscription we want to know who they are and put them on the job at once and keep them there till they get it good and plenty.

Mr. Wilson purposes to go to war with Germany but not the German people and we presume he purposes to do it with America without the American people. But the German people at the other end and the American people at this end will have to bear the brunt and pay the costs.

Autocracy will not be in it to share the cruel. It was never intended it should. It will be in it for the spoils. It is autocracy's fight all around at the expense and with the lives of the common people. And unless the autocracy of wealth as well as autocracy in government is brot under subjection all the horrors of the past two years and eight months will be for naught. Dollar autocracy is just as cruel, merciless and treacherous as the facts gathered from its history show. As Prussian Autocracy. Down with all Autocracy.

"LOPSIDED PATRIOTISM"

Editor The Tribune:

The peaceful citizen who has studied our country's history and has an earnest desire to preserve our free institutions," may feel that his study of our Nation's history has been thorough and complete but to those of us whose minds are unbiased and whose ideas are not curtailed by cowardly fear of military service to our country, it appears that in his review of our nation's past he has lost sight of the more important facts which concern the establishing and maintaining of our present liberties. This guardian of liberty must understand that we obtain from this old world only a return for what we put into it. This is true of nations as well as individuals, and this nation which has always been foremost in promoting the interests of humanity must at this time shoulder the responsibility that is rightfully its own and prosecute a vigorous campaign in the cause which we believe will ultimately result in the permanent destruction of liberty's greatest foe, Despotism.

We are told that if the country were invaded practically every able bodied man would enlist; are we to remain idle until our country is actually invaded? Is invasion the only crime against a nation or a people?

We fear that those persons whose limited conception prevents their realization of the exact state of affairs would not offer their services even though hostile forces were landed within our boundaries. If the arguments given now were inadequate such persons would seek new ways by which to escape duty.

The expression that "conscription is the invention of Kings and Kaisers and does not belong to America," is not the result of sound judgment and careful thought, but is rather to be compared to the straw which a drowning man grasps, to save his mortal self. Individuals who circulate such statements are the most formidable foe to humanity since they destroy unity of opinion and make impossible the unity of action so necessary to the success of the administration's plan.

The citizen, who by word pretends to love his country but who by his actions shows his willingness to allow his fellowmen to volunteer to fight his battles, suffer hardships for both and perhaps sacrifice his life for the benefit of future generations has developed a lopsided form of patriotism that is decidedly unamerican.

For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this thru your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and lustrous.

Gray, faded hair, tho no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

DON'T HURT A BIT!

Lift your old, torturous corns and calluses right off with the fingers.

This tiny bottle holds the wonder of wonders. It contains an almost magic al drug discovered by a Cincinnati man. It is called freezeone. It is a compound made from ether.

Apply a few drops of this freezeone upon a tender, aching corn or a hardened callus. Instantly soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you just lift it off with the fingers.

You feel no pain or soreness when applying freezeone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the skin.

Just ask in any drug store for a small bottle of freezeone. This will cost but a few cents but will positively rid your poor, suffering feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, or the tough calluses on bottom of feet. Genuine freezeone has a yellow label. Look for yellow label.
